Zotero extension for Word
Mari Paz Vera | mavera@vcc.ca
Kristina Oldenburg | koldenburg@vcc.ca

1. Open Zotero for desktop.

2. Open Word. Check for the word “Zotero” (top of the page, on the right of the ribbon).
   Note: if you have just installed Zotero, you may need to restart your computer before you see it.

3. Begin writing. When you need to insert an in-text citation, click the word Zotero:

4. Click Add/Edit Citation.
5. Choose the citation style you need to use, and click OK:

![Zotero citation style selection window]

6. A Zotero box should open in front of your Word document. Begin typing the name of the author or article, and press enter once Zotero finds the article:

![Zotero input field]

Students held a range of opinions about the videos. (Citation)

Z - Mestre

7. Zotero should insert an in-text citation.

8. Continue working on your assignment, adding in-text citations as needed.

9. When you’re ready to create a reference list, move your cursor to wherever on the page you want your reference list (or bibliography, etc).

10. Click Add/Edit Bibliography

!Add/Edit Bibliography

Students held a range of opinions about the videos (Mestre, 2012). Regardless, they all recognized the need to stretch it out regularly when they were working on their assignments (Mata Dia, de Souza, Leopoldino, & Oliveira, 2017). Helpful library workers helped them when they had questions (Anderson, 2008).

11. Zotero should insert a bibliography at that place in your Word document. It will only include titles that you have as in-text citations.

Note that you must check the bibliography for formatting errors. You can fix it in your Word document. If you fix it in Zotero, then Zotero shouldn’t make the same mistake again with that reference!

!References

References

